Toft Historical Society was formed in 2001 for anyone interested in investigating and recording the history of the Village, its community, and its environment past and present. Since its foundation the Society has organised a series of exhibitions addressing different aspects of village life that have been publicly displayed biannually in the Peoples' Hall. Each exhibition has aroused considerable interest within Toft and surrounding villages.

The Society is an informal group holding regular meetings, talks and events, open to all, and always interested in new material, contacts, and members. In the ten years of its existence it has produced five exhibitions. In the interest of maintaining a lasting documentation a web site was opened to coincide with the 2007 exhibition Mapping Toft.

The growing archive is now undergoing comprehensive development and, because of its expanding nature, is re-launched in 2010 as a dedicated site with a regularly evolving range of contributions - firstly, covering the subjects of past and future exhibitions, secondly, providing a locus for articles and documents of a relevant nature, and thirdly, for a revised general history of the Village. The latter is in production as a group exercise and it is hoped will be available to coincide with the Society's next planned exhibition in 2011.

Further information about the Programme is available from the Secretary.
